WEDNESDAY MORNING, August 25, 1858 HUNTING IN VIRGINIA.

[From the Charlottesville Advocate.] Mr. Editor:-I do not know that you are given to the noble sports of the chase, but as many of the old hunters of Albemarle will lend a listening ear to the tales of the hunters' camp, I furnish you a basty sketch of a week's pleasure some of your countymen en-joyed in the mountains of Western Virginia. Our party, consisting of six gentlemen from Albemarle and one from Philadelphia, each well mounted and fully equipped for the hunt, with two wagons loaded with the provisions and camp utensils, and a fine pack of twenty-five good stag hounds, were on the road by 11 o'clock of the 6th inst., bound for no particular destination, but with light bearts and quick pulse, were seeking some good hunting ground in Western Virginia .-A merrier, happier bunting party than ours never crossed Buffalo Gap. Upon consultation, we pitched our tents on the Big Survey Mountain, near the Lebanon White Sulphur Springe, and within a short distance of the Harrisonburg and Warm Springs and Parkereburg Turopikes. Our arrival was hearti-encamped. A day's observation made us acquainted with the advantages and great beauty of our locality. Near by, in the lovely, hospitable valley of the Calf Pasture, was located a bold strong sulphur spring. All around were free-stone springs, whose waters were suited to our Eastern tastes. As far as the eye could reach towards the West were seen the towering beights of the Pendleton and Warm Springs Mountain. One could imagine that it was of just such a lovely valley as this that of the Lake. The people were hospitable to a fault. At evening's witching hour our camp was enlivened by the smiling faces of the fair daughters of the valley, who, with their escorts, joined us at our festive board.

by Mr. Rex Rood, upon whose land we were

The bunting was excellent. Our range extended over the Big Survey, including the North, Coal Pit Knobs, Little Hunkey, and Shenandoau Mountains. Our dogs were not molected by the settlers. The deer stands were well known, accessible, and, what is better, were generally sure of a deer during the chase. A week thus pleasantly spent, and our trophies were six antiered denizers of the forest. A week from the time we left home we had made our trip and our hunt, both enjoyed with a keen relish and surrendered with regret by all. Mr. Rex Rood promised to put up at the Sulphur Spring, some cabins for the use of bunting parties, which we hope to occupy and enjoy in our next fall hunt. In conclusion, I would advise some of our many hunting parties to make their coming camp season in this locality. They will find everything pleasant and HUNTER. game abundant.

ADDISON ON THE TELEGRAPH. In the 241st number of the Spectator is a playful suggestion, by Addison, in regard to absent lovers, which, although written early in the eighteenth century, has found its realization in the middle of thenineteenth .-After quoting a letter from Asteria, complaining of the regret she felt at the absence of her husband, and suggesting various remedies for her relief, among which was one of having an hour set apart for mutual remembrance in prayer, he adds the following:

"Strada, in one of his Prolusions, gives an account of a chimerical correspondence be- figure they may designate. tween two friends, by the help of a certain loadstone, which had such virtue in it that it the needles so touched began to move, the other, though at never so great a distance, and State. moved at the same time and in the same manner. He tells us that the two friends, being each of them possessed of one of these needles, made a kind of dial-plate, inscribing it with the four and twenty letters, in the same manner as the hours of the day are marked upon the ordinary dial-plate. They then fixed one of the needles on each of these in such a manner that they could move round without impediment, so as to touch any one of the four-and-twenty letters. Upon their separating one from another, into distant countries, they agreed to withdraw themselves punctuan instant, over cities or mountains, seas or deserts."

This strange vagary of an ancient writer, quoted by Addison for the amusement of his (Ark) True Democrat. readers, has wonderfully become a fixed truth in the progress of modern science. How little did Addison dream that what he was then suggesting in a vein of playful humor, should tax the minds of wise men to accomplish, until the whole invention should be perfected gether, and thought is made to pass between with the rapidity almost of its own motions.
